En el segundo semestre de 2015 se cumplió el tercer año de la administración del presidente Enrique Peña Nieto, sobre el cual estuvieron los reflectores, pero no por su informe de gobierno sino porque el periodo se caracterizó por una serie de acontecimientos que cimbraron al país, tanto en el escenario económico como en el político y el social, varios de los cuales afectaron negativamente la imagen presidencial.

En el ámbito político, el golpe lo dio Joaquín “Chapo” Guzmán, quien con su espectacular fuga de una prisión de “alta seguridad” dejó muy mal parado al presidente y a su secretario de Gobernación, que habían prometido que el narcotraficante no volvería a escapar. En tanto que en el ámbito económico, la incontenible debacle del peso y la caída del precio del crudo de exportación terminaron por afectar las finanzas públicas y la promesa presidencial de crecimiento y prosperidad.

En la parte social, la Suprema Corte de Justicia de la Nación dio la nota al obligar al debate de dos temas “tabú” en México: el matrimonio entre personas del mismo sexo y el consumo lúdico de marihuana. El aval de la SCJN generó tanto aplausos como críticas y marcó el cierre de un semestre que, por los avances y por los retrocesos experimentados, dejó huella en el país.
